time between opinions. The way things are is so comfortable. Change is often difficult. Change is often feared, not because the change which is going to come into effect is going to hurt anybody, it's just that the unknown tends to make people uneasy. In 1999, we should not be made uneasy or uncomfortable by the notion that females should be treated with equity and respect, that their human dignity ought to be honored in the same way that we would like ours to be honored. And until that day comes, it will be necessary for me, and I would hope others, to continue hammering on this issue time after time after time. Before you all think I'm adopting a tactic which is counterproductive, I'm going to give you an example. But come to think about it, when I consider the lack of success of that example, maybe my method is counterproductive but I would like to believe that my presentation...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...is more engaging. How many have gone to church and heard a new thing? You always hear the same thing, over and over and over. Every time you go to church, you hear the same thing. Sometimes the preacher can launch into a dissertation and you know what he or she is going to say next. But sometimes repetition is the only way to bring about a change. Had not the Colorado River with persistence run its course, Senator Bourne, there would not be a Grand Canyon. I don't hope for anything as spectacular or marvelous as that. All I want to do is cause us to treat others as we would like to be treated, especially when those others are females. Thank you.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Thank you, Senator Chambers. For discussion on the confirmation report of the Transportation Committee, Senator Wehrbein. Senator Wehrbein waived. Senator Bromm, you're recognized to close.

SENATOR BROMM: Thank you, Lieutenant Governor, and I think we...I think we all recognize the points that Senator Chambers is making and we all need to be very cognizant as we have an opportunity to...to have an impact on those decisions. I would...I should say, and I didn't know this when he...when Senator Chambers asked me questions earlier, but there was on
